10 ⁰⁰	0930: Today I am writing a presentation on Diabetes. This involves running analysis via our databases, analysing it & preparing a PowerPoint presentation	0930: Arrive & check emails - two client queries have come in this morning so I set to task on one of these. Queries offer a chance to do more experimental analysis & I enjoy working out how best to answer the client's needs	1000: Client Presentations - 10am start and it's at their offices so I am travelling via central London to arrive on time. We are presenting on two different disease areas today, to teams of around 5 or 6 people, with 2 of us sharing the presentations.	0930: Weekly team meeting; gives us a chance to discuss feedback from yesterday's meeting & current workloads	0930: My turn to write up selected topical health stories from the news this week, bringing in a different aspect to my normal work. I'm on rota for this around once a month

12 ⁰⁰				1100: Prepare materials for client training next week. In my role I assume the lead for training new clients on our databases, so I need to ensure all materials are tailored to their requirements
13 ⁰⁰	1300: Lunch. Meet up with the other graduates	1300: Lunch		1330: Lunch	1230: Attend a lunch & learn session run by a senior internal member on hyperlipidemia
14 ⁰⁰	1400: Carry on with the diabetes presentation, aiming to have it finished by 530pm	1400: Meeting with execs & an external client to discuss possible services	1400: Arrive back at the office		1400: Report writing continues, & I am also responsible for checking reports written by my colleagues
15 ⁰⁰			1430: Spend the rest of the afternoon doing follow-up from the presentation, which included running some extra analysis to answer questions which arose in the meeting. Give to another exec to check my work before I leave at 530pm	1430: Reporting. Each month we send our clients reports tracking their products. As part of this I write a number of reports this afternoon covering different disease areas.
16 ⁰⁰		1530: Spend the rest of the day working on my graduate project, in which I am working on developing new business opportunities for an existing client
17 ⁰⁰					1700: Friday drinks!
